English in Service

is a really significant book title. This text teaches the art of communication through actual communication by the pupils.

English in Service arouses the pupils to enthusiastic efforts to entertain, to inform, or to persuade some real audience, and then coaches their efforts skillfully. It shows them how to do well this time and better the next.

In it the classroom occasions for speaking and writing are so like those in everyday work and play that the classroom English will "carry over" into other recitations and the hours after school.

The authors, W. Wilbur Hatfield, of the Chicago Normal College, and A. Laura McGregor, of the Washington Junior High School, Rochester, N.Y., know both junior high school children and modern educational methods. Their text is thoroughly sane and strikingly progressive.

The book will appear this spring. Sample copies will be furnished to any who are immediately interested in the selection of a composition text for grades VII–IX.

Do you know the importance of the words you teach?

Is it more important to teach the words mean, soon, right, white than to teach the words bite, dart, crowd, frown?

Should the words cup, angel, scorn, brick be taught before the words great, live, order, come?

What 500 words would you include in a basic list in teaching English to foreigners?

Are the words used in some textbooks so difficult that children cannot comprehend the subject matter?

To extend your spelling lists, where would you find the RIGHT words?

THE TEACHER'S WORD BOOK

By EDWARD L. THORNDIKE

answers these and many other questions of importance to elementary- and high-school teachers and to students of educational measurement.

The TEACHER'S WORD BOOK comprises the 10,000 most used words in the English language. It is based on a count of over 4,000,000 words found in 41 different sources. The words are alphabetically arranged. Each word is followed by a key number—simple to use—which shows its place in importance in the list of 10,000.

The TEACHER'S WORD BOOK is decidedly one of the most important contributions to modern educational literature.

Short Stories of Various Types

By LAURA F. FRECK
Head of English Department, High School, Jamestown, N.Y.

This collection is especially adapted to the capacity and interest of the first-year high school pupil.

The modern short story makes a direct appeal to the modern spirit of the age, an appeal thoroughly in accord with present day American pedagogy. Many modern short story writers have not been surpassed in style, in diction, in literary craftsmanship, by any of their predecessors. In making selections from among the best products of our modern short story writers, Miss Freck has chosen the best of any age or any literature. Far the larger part of your pupil's future fiction reading is going to be the short story. Give them a taste for the best.

Short Stories of Various Types* is a representative volume of a series consisting of sixty-one titles uniformly bound in blue cloth, excellent in mechanical workmanship and carefully edited by people chosen with a view to their special qualifications for the texts which they edit.

? Why "Living Literature" ?

The Living Literature Series has brought to the field of English Classics some entirely new and distinctive features. In the first place, the editors have consistently kept in mind one vital and all-important feature—the bringing of the pupil to an appreciation of the story itself.

The usual barrage of pedantic notes and the pedagogical entanglements that serve only to cut off the student's approach to the story have been eliminated.

The Editors of the Series have adopted the principle that if the Classics are to accomplish their purpose they should be read, not studied—that literary taste and joy of reading cannot be developed by drudgery.

"Enjoyment" and "appreciation" are the keynotes to the Series. In the next place, the titles are for the most part new and fresh. Every title, however, has been approved by the Board of College Entrance Requirements.

The Editors are among the country's most famous scholars and literary men.

The first titles are:

Sheridan's The Rivals, edited by WILLIAM LYON PHELPS. $0.52

Selected Writings of Abraham Lincoln, edited by ALBERT BUSHNELL HART 52

Burney's Evelina, edited by EDWIN BJÖRKMAN 52

Huxley's Autobiography and Essays, edited by BRANDER MATTHEWS 52

Dickens' Barnaby Rudge, edited by LEON H. VINCENT 52

Stevenson's Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, edited by RICHARD BURTON 52

Thackeray's Barry Lyndon, edited by CHARLES ELBERT RHODES 52

Announcing

"The Victrola in Correlation with English and American Literature"

A new practical help in the teaching of English

FREE

to all teachers of English and other interested persons

This booklet lists over 350 matchless Victor Records, with descriptive notes, giving —Musical settings to some of the world's greatest poetry.

—Scenes from Shakespeare by world-famed interpreters.

—Recitations and readings from Dickens, Poe, Holmes, Kipling, Riley, Mark Twain, Field, Dunbar, etc.

—Musical settings to lyrics from "The Lady of the Lake," "Comus," "L'Allegro," "Il Pensieroso," etc.

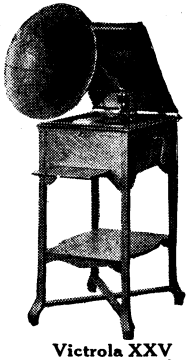
—Suggested musical correlations in mood and atmosphere for literary masterpieces.

—Chronological table of parallel music, literature, art, and world events.

The Victrola, as an element of interest, should enlist the co-operation of all the teachers in the school. It has a great field of service in the English class room. Music and poetry are inter-allied arts, the one enhancing the appreciation and enjoyment of the other.

The use of Victor Records at the proper time in a recitation, does much to vitalize the lesson, and lifts a seemingly dry subject from the black-and-white of the printed page into the realm of human interest.

Do not forget that this intensely interesting and very helpful booklet is yours for the asking.



Victrola XXV especially made for School use

Finish, golden oak, waxed.

This is the instrument that is used in thousands of schools. Many years' experience has proved it is the instrument best adapted to all-round school use.

When the Victrola is not in use, the horn can be placed under the instrument safe and secure from danger, and the cabinet can be locked to protect it from dust and promiscuous use by irresponsible people.
